About This List

THIS LIST OF KOREAN passengers arriving in Honolulu by steamship from 1903 to late 1905 was compiled from microfilmed copies of passenger manifests held by the National Archives and Records Administration.* The compiled list includes the names of passengers on sixty-four voyages aboard eleven ships: the America Maru, China, Coptic, Doric, Gaelic, Hongkong Maru, Korea, Manchuria, Mongolia, Nippon Maru, and Siberia. The earliest voyage included in this list arrived in Honolulu January 13, 1903, and the latest, August 8, 1905.

The documents from which this list was compiled bear the title “List or Manifest of Alien Immigrants for the Commissioner of Immigration.” These are large columnar forms, completed by hand. The handwriting and the quality of the microfilm reproductions sometimes make it difficult to interpret individual entries. Hence, the list below includes an occasional incomplete item or question mark to indicate unclear information.

The present list is a subset of the information contained on the original manifests. Listed here are name, age, marital status, last residence, ship, and date of arrival. The original forms also include columns for a variety of information about each passenger, including occupation, ability to read or write, residence, landing port, and final destination. The form also has columns to indicate whether the passenger held a ticket to the final destination; who paid the traveler’s passage; whether the passenger carried money; whether the passenger had been in the United States before; whether the passenger was joining relatives; and whether the passenger had ever been supported by charity or was a polygamist. In addition, there are columns for notes about the passenger’s physical and mental health and any physical deformities.

In most cases, the answers to these questions are uniform for all passengers, and there is little value in including them here. For example, with few exceptions, each person’s occupation is listed as farmer (later farm laborer). The exceptions are six persons identified as clerks. Their names are marked by asterisks in the list that follows.

A similar example is the information on literacy. All the arriving passengers are listed as being able to read and write. Only on the earliest manifests are there any notations that this refers to literacy in Korean, not English, though that must certainly have been the case.

Yet other examples of omitted entries with marginal value to the historical researcher are those on final destination, money in the possession of the traveler, and items related to health and character. Honolulu is invariably given as the final destination. All passengers are listed as possessing a small amount of money, usually thirty to fifty dollars. None is listed as being in bad health or being a polygamist.

Information on last residence is ambiguous. There is no way to determine whether these entries referred to an individual's residence immediately before passage or to the location of a permanent family domicile.

Personal names also present problems. Those listed on the manifest were supplied by immigration office personnel or interpreters aboard the ships. They do not necessarily reflect the preferences of the individuals. Moreover, individuals sometimes changed their names and may not be listed here under the names by which they are more widely known.

According to government reports, 7,291 Korean immigrants were admitted to Hawai'i in the period up to 1910.* The present list contains 7,415 entries, a few of which appear to represent different trips by the same individual. Although extensive, the list can not be considered a definitive record of all the early Korean immigrants to the Islands. Further research may uncover additional passenger lists or other resources that will allow us to add to this record.
